FABRICE SCHOMBERG

Fabrice Schomberg: writer To date, I have written approximately 700 short stories, poems and aphorisms, that I unites in a project I called Sketched Worlds. This is a platform where I host my ideas and I hope to inspire others to use them as templates and create from them in the artist's own particular medium. I was Born to an English/French family in Colchester, a small town that used to be the capital of England in Roman times. My parents migrated to Jerusalem in pursuit of religion. This is reflected in my work such as in the lecture, :the apple Tree which showcases the ideas behind Analyse: the Human Computer, a story that is published in my book Stardust, and my most recent lecture The Cycle of Life. I have covered various forms of art and music in depth, such as developing animated army simulators for Elron/Tecsys and painted ceramics for the Royal Delft Blue factory (Porceleyne Fles), am musically experienced with the classical bassoon & jazz piano as well as in the domain of electronic music (Sonology) and thus regard myself as a "General Artist". I have attended the The Royal Conservatorium of The Hague and The Royal Art Academy of The Hague, and graduated from The Jerusalem Music Academy and the The Gerrit Rietveld Art Academy in Amsterdam. Having been a filmmaker and cameraman for various news media and satellite channels, I founded and direct Sketched Worlds, a project which has a set goal to encourage others to create new worlds in any medium, inspired by the stories that I write. Sketched Worlds publishes books, broadcasts over the radio, produces performances and music releases.
