

HEIDI HOLMSTRÖM

'Someone once said I have a polyamorous practice '

Heidi Holmström (she/her b.1997 Helsinki) is an artist, observer and cloud writer, questioning topics such as social geography, the attributes of place and aesthetics of behavior. Without having a hierarchy in her practice, it crawls and jogs with urgent notions and sharp observations, seeking to mirror, burst and trace, the on-going, the temporary, the present. Circulating in situation-and site-specific installations, interventions and sound, the concept-based works exist in spaces as characteristics of the current, leaving their trace and seeking for a double-sided recognition of their existence. Working in dialogue with the space; spatial recognition is essential to her practice. From transmitting bird alarm calls through conference speakers into electricity pole structures, to building interventions into former U.S Embassy surveillance rooms, the material non hierarchy allows her work to take the form it needs.

It meanders. And if it doesn't it will. The blood crawls where it cannot go, right? And so it bab- bles. /// If an artistic practice is flexible and fluid and curious, and it often is, you could compare it to a stream of water that meanders. And the pebbles in that stream could be little ideas that get picked up along the way and with every bend they get polished and with every turn they change shape. Then an exhibition could be one of those corners where these particular stones come together and people that are curious could come there, step into the stream. 'meander' was a group exhibition by Heidi Holmström, Tijn Gerards, Baroeg Mulder, Elvira Pereira and Frans van Hoek. Exhibition was facilitated by Heidi Holmström & Tijn Gerards

PROJECTS

- 2024 50Hz Conference Call Nap +
DeWaastraat Amsterdam, Netherlands
heidiholmstrom.com/50Hz-conference-call 50hz conference call focuses on temporality of acoustic ecologies of a place. Part of a research project Some places only exist through voices, the project focuses on the importance of hearing. To hear, we must listen. While landscape is often described as visible features of an area of land, sounding becomes essential in re-constructing these temporalities where over time things change and get lost - and which these sounds inhabit. The contrast in between the constructed landscapes and nature can be realised how birds are inhabiting the electricity lines. As not fully becoming a part in the electricity circuit, the birds use the power lines to seek rest, shield and to get a point of view. The adaptation occurs on these electricity lines, as the birds use them as some sort of replacement for trees; It becomes their momentary 'seat'. While these landscapes change, the nature that surrounds it does too. Since nature doesn't respond to symmetry, it forms a polyphonic score of the present. Finally 'having seat at the table', the 12 conference speakers transmit the body of the birds. Their sounds, communication- and alarm calls forms an asymmetric score of their sonic qualities, which introduces as what joy and urgency sounds like at the same time. Site-specific focus in The Netherlands, the audio consists of Amsterdam wildlife footage and field recordings made in Moordercht, which is one of the last places in the Netherlands where wooden electricity poles run energy. exhibited part of Graduation show 2024, as well as DeWaasstraat at Nap+ in september 2024.

Scores on a cold ground & Blade pitch scores Billytown Den Haag, Netherlands heidholmstrom.com/Scores-on-a-cold-ground-1-2-3 Inspired by the jumps executed during the women's free programs at the Beijing 2022 Olympics and displayed at Billytown in The Hague, the piece features three miniature ice rinks and a series of notational scores derived from these Olympic performances. By translating the physical movements of skaters into a musical score, the work transforms something inherently non-musical into a playable composition. The piece critically examines the intense, often hostile nature of high-performance sports like Olympic figure skating, questioning whether there is truly any "freedom" in the so-called free programs. Focusing on the precise moment when a skate blade cuts into the ice—creating a sharp scratch on its surface—the artwork emphasizes the meticulous calculation and pressure underlying the sport. In doing so, it brings attention to the immense psychological and physical strain athletes endure, framing the act of skating not just as an athletic feat but as a form of calculated precision under extreme stress.

2023 Hear----from----you---soon---- Phatic Utterances duo-exhibition w Baroeg Mulder, Antwerp, BE Antwerp, Belgium heidholmstrom.com/hear-from-u-soon "Hear----from----you---soon----" is a spatial installation that explores the rhythm and emptiness of everyday phatic utterances—phrases like "hear from you soon," "see you soon," or "let's get a coffee sometime soon." These common, often insincere exchanges form an abstract, fragmented score that resists authenticity or deep meaning. The phrases are scattered across the floor, arranged as surface-level gestures, creating a tactical code for words that may not carry any real significance for the recipient. Accompanying the installation is a loop of hollow sounds generated from recordings of rhythmic clapping patterns that correspond to these phrases. The sound reverberates through the space, activating the white wooden blocks that serve as both a visual and auditory score for the composition. This interplay between sound and structure highlights the disconnect between form and meaning. As part of the installation's dynamic process, the top three rows of phatic phrases were re-formed daily during the exhibition based on phrases overheard from the audience. If no new phrases were heard, no new row was added. This evolving structure reflects the constant flow of surface-level communication while emphasizing the transitory, often inconsequential nature of these interactions.

is a time- and site-specific light installation/intervention set within the ruins of a shed in Northern Portugal. Rather than focusing on aesthetic expectations, the piece explores the essence of its source—sunlight—as a primary element of transformation. Drawing inspiration from the myth of the Phoenix, which is said to carry seven halos atop its head, the installation references the natural and cultural landscape of the region. Northern Portugal, known for its cork oak trees (Quercus suber), is annually ravaged by forest fires. Yet, these unique trees rise resiliently from the ashes due to the insulating properties of cork, which protect them from the flames. Situated near Coimbra, the piece responds to this local context by drawing a parallel with the Phoenix myth—a symbol of immortality and rebirth. Just as the Phoenix is reborn from the ashes of its predecessor, the cork trees too find new life after the fires, embodying a cyclical process of destruction and regeneration. The installation captures this idea of renewal, using light to evoke the presence of the sun and the life-giving force it represents.

2023 Temporary placement Ponte d'Arte Residency Coimbra, Portugal heidholmstrom.com/Temporary-placement Temporary intervention on a former abandoned gas station. On-site research on geographies and living ecosystem of cork trees, and their ability to re-grow after yearly forest fires. 1cm layer of ash that involves burnt cork from these 'fire proof' trees is distributed on the roof of the empty gas station as a performative act, as a temporary ritual.
